

ILLINOIS CONGRESSIONAL DELEGATION

113th Congress

Two Senators represent each state in the U.S. Senate and are elected to serve six-year terms. U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D) of Springfield was elected to represent Illinois for a third term in 2008. Mark Kirk of Highland Park was elected to the U.S. Senate in 2010. See pages 16-19 for U.S. Senator photos and biographies.

In the November 2012 general election, Illinois voters elected 18 candidates to serve in the U.S. House of Representatives for two-year terms. Illinois lost one of its 19 House seats as a result of the 2010 census reapportionment, wherein the 435 seats in Congress are redistributed based on population shifts among the states. The Illinois congressional map was redrawn into 18 geographical districts (see pages 43-44), from which 12 Democratic and six Republican U.S. Representatives were elected to serve in the 113th Congress.

Democrats picked up four congressional seats in the 2012 general election, reversing the trend from 2010. In the 8th Congressional District, Iraq war veteran Tammy Duckworth (D) defeated first-term Republican U.S. Rep. Joe Walsh. Democrat Brad Schneider edged freshman Republican Congressman Robert Dold in the 10th district. In the redrawn 11th district, Democrat Bill Foster, who represented the 14th district in 2008-10, defeated U.S. Rep. Judy Biggert (R), a longtime incumbent representing the 13th district. Political newcomer Cheri Bustos (D) defeated another single-term congressman, U.S. Rep. Bobby Schilling (R), in the 17th Congressional District.

Incumbents held on to 12 Illinois congressional seats while two newcomers filled the seats of retiring representatives. Republican Rodney Davis was elected in the redrawn 13th district, and retired Maj. Gen. William Enyart (D) won the 16th district seat.

In the 2nd Congressional District, U.S. Rep. Jesse Jackson, Jr. resigned from office two weeks after the general election, leaving the seat vacant until a special election was held. After edging out several contenders in a February primary, former state Rep. Robin Kelly (D) was elected to the 2nd district seat on April 9, 2013.

The 113th Congress serves from Jan. 3, 2013, to Jan. 3, 2015.
